WELCOME TO THE VOLUNTEER PROGRAM OF THE FOREST SERVICE

The Forest Service and its Volunteer Program has something for almost everyone—retirees, professionals, housewives, students, and young people, as well as service clubs and organizations. If you like people and care about our country's natural resources, the Forest Service needs your time and talents.

Some volunteers may work full-time for several months, while others donate a few hours a day each week, or contribute a "one time" service. Students may volunteer to earn college credits through a college approved Intern program, or to become familiar with Forest Service activities and philosophy. Many individuals have found that their volunteer experience has guided them towards job interest and possible careers. Retirees or others with skills to share often find that a volunteer position provides the flexibility not offered by a permanent or full-time job.

Because Forest Service volunteers are not Federal employees, they are not subject to federal employment regulations. The Forest Service and the volunteer negotiate an agreement, stating what responsibilities and benefits have been agreed upon. All volunteers are covered by the Federal Tort Claims Act, and the Federal Worker's Compensation Act.

The Forest Service may also provide transportation, housing, a uniform, or a subsistence allowance, depending on the nature of the volunteer project and the availability of funds. The field subsistence rate is around $10.00 per day. The actual amount varies, depending on the appraised actual costs for the area.

The Forest Service is comprised of nine regions and several Research Stations, all of which have a variety of volunteer opportunities. The mission of the Intermountain Region is to manage and maintain National Forest lands in Idaho, Nevada, Utah, and Western Wyoming. The Intermountain Research Station's mission is to provide scientific knowledge to help resource managers meet human needs. The Intermountain Station has research laboratories located in Montana, Idaho, Utah, and Nevada. Research is coordinated with research conducted at neighboring colleges and universities. During Fiscal Year 1987, the Intermountain Region and Intermountain Station had over 17,000 volunteers. The work they accomplished was appraised at $3.9 million dollars.

After you've read the Volunteer Directory and found some interesting positions, get in touch with the listed contact person. When you write, please detach and complete a volunteer application, located in the back of the directory, and include it with your letter. If you telephone the contact person, some of the questions you may want to ask are: What kind of weather should I expect? What equipment might I need? What specific challenges and opportunities does the project present? Can I work for a longer or shorter period? Once you've reached an agreement with the contact person, please show up on the appointed day. IF FOR ANY REASON YOU WILL BE LATE OR HAVE A CHANGE IN PLANS, PLEASE CONTACT US IMMEDIATELY so we will not worry about you and can make alternate plans, if necessary. We appreciate your willingness to donate your services and the Forest you agree to serve is depending on you!

ARCHEOLOGY TECHNICIAN - ARCHEOLOGY SURVEYOR

Volunteers are needed to help inventory National Forest lands for prehistoric and historic sites (Indian burial grounds, hunting sites, old mining camps, homesteads). Fieldwork varies but may involve inventory surveys, photography, mapping, and test excavation. Volunteers frequently work in remote areas for up to four weeks. Volunteers must be in good health and provide camping equipment. Transportation will be provided—other benefits will depend upon the project. Candidates with background experience in archeology, anthropology, or history will be given first consideration. Some projects will investigate river areas, and volunteers with river running experience (kayak/raft) are also needed.

CAMPGROUND HOST

Campground Hosts are National Forest Volunteers who serve as picnic ground or campground patrons; they greet visitors, provide information, and help with grounds upkeep. Campground Hosts also offer information, explain regulations, perform minor maintenance, and participate in interpretive programs.

In return for their services, Campground Hosts can stay at one campground all summer. Often they get first choice at a campground unit, provided the unit is visible to other campers. Hosts do not pay recreation fees.

Although Hosts are of different ages and backgrounds, they are friendly, enjoy the outdoors, and are eager to learn and share knowledge about their forest area. Hosts must be at least 18 years old and must have a camper, trailer, or mobile home.
